And, starting with TOS 34 Amok Time, the first episode broadcast in Season 2, his credit is now in the opening list of four names. Roddenberry, Shatner, Nimoy and now Kelley, a dramatic promotion since his original group credit in Season 1 in TOS 03 The Corbomite Maneuver, and the upgrade to a single stand-alone screen credit in TOS 22 Return of the Archons.

Komack, James	Director TOS 49 A Piece of the Action
Kovack, Nancy	Guest Star Nona TOS 45 A Private Little War

Nancy Kovack had an extensive movie career and was married to conductor Zubin Mehta. She gets my vote as one of the most beautiful actresses in the original series.

Lansing, Robert
Gary Seven

Guest Star as Mister Seven TOS 55 Assignment: Earth

Since this was a pilot for another series "Assignment: Earth", I suppose it was not so amazing for his credit to come at the head of the episode, right after the title. The series did not sell and this Star Trek episode is the only record of the idea.

Again, Rusty shared duties as Assistant Director (AD) with Greg Peters where Rusty took the even-numbered episodes and Greg took the odd-numbered episodes (with a few inconsistencies, such as TOS 47 Obsession where they both got the AD credit.). Greg was often the Unit Production Manager for those episodes where he wasn't AD. Phil Rawlins also filled in – no pun intended- during Season 2.

Greg shared duties as Assistant Director with Rusty Meek where Rusty took the even-numbered episodes and Greg took the odd-numbered episodes (with a few inconsistencies, such as TOS 47 Obsession, where they are both listed). Greg was often the Unit Production Manager for those episodes where Rusty was Assistant Director. Phil Rawlins also filled in – no pun intended- during Season 2.

Makora TOS 38 The Apple

Because of the strange makeup in TOS 38 "The Apple", you might not recognize this actor who became famous for many TV roles, especially as Detective Ken "Hutch" Hutchinson on Starsky and Hutch, a role he played from 1975 until 1979.

LIST OF MINI-STARS IN THE SECOND SEASON

Besides the three major stars, Shatner, Nimoy and Kelley, there were series “regulars”, James Doohan, George Takei, Walter Koenig and Majel Barrett. But after that were bit parts, where some actors appeared more than once. Surprising that we didn’t recognize the same faces playing different roles.

Here’s a list of those “journeyman actors” that appeared more than once in Season Two. Sometimes you might not recognize them in different roles. Some of them played the same role for a few episodes. Do you think any of these should have been “regulars”? Compare this with the list from Seasons One and Three

Notes on Star Trek –Season 2

Joe D’Agosta certainly got in gear for Season 2 with many notable stars in leading roles. I have to rate Jane Wyatt (it says Miss Jane Wyatt in the credits for some reason) is at the top of the list, playing Spock’s mother in TOS 44 Journey to Babel. But Julie Newmar (TOS 32 Friday’s Child) and Eleanor Donahue (TOS 31 Metamorphosis) were certainly significant actors long before (and long after) their Star Trek roles. Until I started this list, I never recognized a very young David Soul (who played Hutch in Starsky and Hutch) as Makora in TOS 38 The Apple.

For me the one plot hole in TOS 31 Metamorphosis is Kirk’s agreeing to keep Cochran and Hedford’s existence “secret”. What would he tell Star Fleet Command? “Commissioner Hedford chose to stay on a distant asteroid. Go find someone else to prevent the war.” Oh sure, that would have worked fine. (NOT!) Of course, Cochran turns up in the Star Trek movies some thirty years later with a VERY different actor and no backstory to explain how he got off the asteroid.

Did you know that the title for “Friday’s Child” refers to the poem that dates back to the early 1800’s:

Monday's child is fair of face
Tuesday's child is full of grace
Wednesday's child is full of woe
Thursday's child has far to go,
Friday's child is loving and giving,
Saturday's child works hard for a living,
But the child that is born on the Sabbath day
Is bonny, blithe, good and gay.

Gay in the last line, of course, means the old definition of happy and fun-loving. While this was intended to predict the personality of a child born on a certain day, I can't see that the Capellan baby born in TOS 32 Friday's Child would be "loving and giving". I think "Thursday's Child" or "Saturday's Child" might have been better choices, don't you?

In TOS 40 The Deadly Years, early in the episode, it shows Kirk responding to a call from the bridge. He answers and then pushes a button. Isn't that reversed? If the film editor (Donald R. Rode) had thought about it, he would have moved the dialogue AFTER the switch was pushed. An editorial error.

TOS 47 Obsession has one gaping plot problem right at the end. If Kirk and Garrovick are transported to the ship at the very moment the bomb is detonated, how can they be sure the "creature" was dead? Nothing else had any effect. Or was the clue that the radioactive garbage they flushed out made it leave the ship and the creature was thus affected by radiation? Should have been one more scene with some kind of proof that it no longer existed. And since it could change its form and ride on gravity, I'm not sure how anyone could tell it was truly gone.

A special word about TOS 42 The Trouble with Tribbles. This was, of course, the first fan-written episode (David Gerrold). I think the mere fact that a fan-written episode was accepted cemented a special bond between Gene Roddenberry and the series fans, a bond that would become all too apparent as the second season came to a close. Season 2 clearly started to include comedy episodes, starting with TOS 41 I, Mudd, TOS 42 The Trouble with Tribbles, and TOS 49 A Piece of the Action. Some may think that these reduced the "serious" nature of Star Trek and made it more a "kid's show". What do you think? Gerrold also had a partial credit in TOS 74 The Cloud Minders. The second fan-written episode was TOS 73 The Lights of Zetar, written by Shari Lewis (of Lamb Chop fame) and her husband, both huge Star Trek fans.

And what's the story behind TOS 43 Bread and Circuses? It's air date was almost 3 months after TOS 42 The Trouble with Tribbles. I don't see any difficult special effects or complex editing, so why the long delay? After the teaser in TOS 47 Gamesters of Triskelion, where Kirk, Chekov and Uhura are magically transported to another planet in another solar system (trinary sun), Kirk starts a log entry with a star date. Since his communicator doesn't work, how is he making a log entry and how would he know the star date? Of course, this is to clue those arriving late to the episode what is going on.

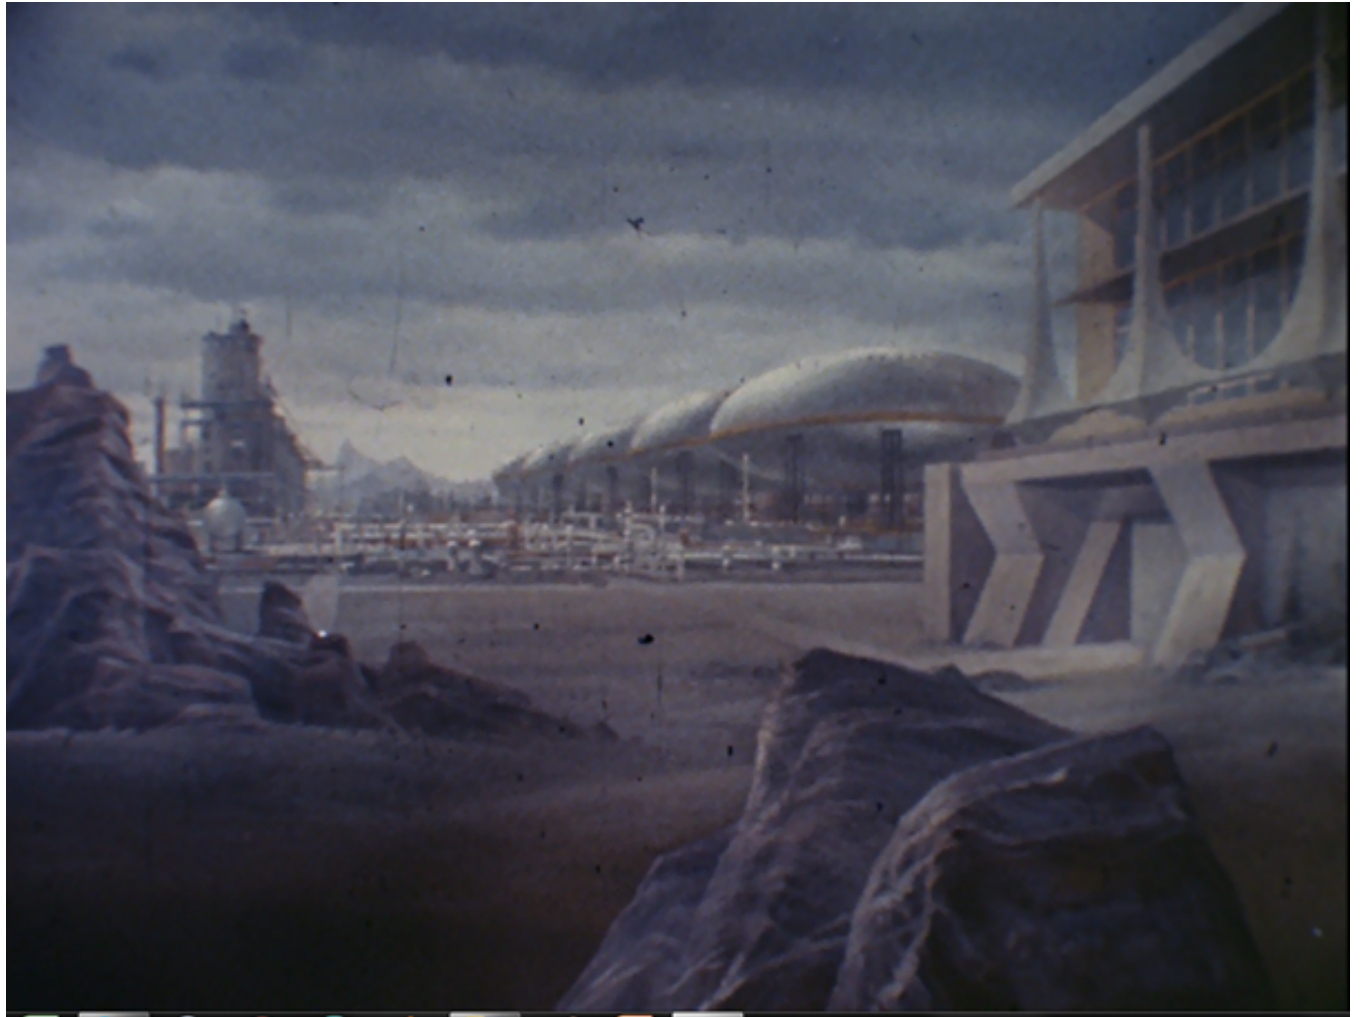

But “Stardate: unknown...” would be more appropriate, an introduction he uses for the following log entry.

Did you notice in TOS 53 The Ultimate Computer that all the external voices, such as Admiral Enright and the M-5 computer itself, are all provided by James Doohan. In fact, Jimmy had a wide range of voices and accents he could do, of which an Aberdeen (Scottish) Chief Engineer was only one of them.

In TOS 54 The Omega Glory, early in the episode there is a close-up of the transporter operator moving ONE of the controls down, with the sound effect of the transporter, but nothing is sent or received. A few seconds later, with everyone on a pad, he moves the REST of controls (3) down. What the heck was all that about? Directorial error! But, a greater mystery in this episode is the title itself. I believe this refers to “Old Glory”, a name for the stars-and-stripes flag of the USA (which features prominently in this episode) on the planet Omega IV. Therefore the Omega Glory is the flag that we know well appearing on this planet. How this flag, together with the Pledge of Allegiance and the Constitution of the USA could have arrived fully formed on this distant planet is never fully explained. At least in TOS 49 A Piece of the Action, the culture was based on a single book about the gangs of Chicago in the 1920’s.

The android body in TOS Return to Tomorrow played by extra Bill Blackburn in an uncredited role (no lines spoken).

Who is under that android make-up? Wikipedia identifies this as Bill Blackburn, an uncredited extra. The blooper reel also has some footage of this actor ripping off his make-up. "You wanted to be in show business!"

From the Roddenberry first season blooper reel.

Possibly the hand of Morgan Woodward (Captain Tracey) in TOS 54 The Omega Glory
